Forecast For East Midlands
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 1600 on Thursday 02 Dec 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 1800 and 0600

Headline:
Rain and cloud spreading east overnight. Brief hill snow possible.

This Evening and Tonight:
Dry but cold evening, with early clear spells. However, cloud will steadily increase, with rain spreading east from midnight. This potentially falling as snow over higher ground at first, but soon turning to rain at all levels. Minimum temperature 0 deg C (32 deg F).

Friday:
Cloudy at first with outbreaks of rain and drizzle, and some hill fog. This clearing southeastwards from late morning, allowing some brighter spells to develop. Less cold than recent days. Maximum temperature 7 deg C (45 deg F).

Outlook for Saturday to Monday:
Chilly weekend with sunshine and showers, wintry over hills. Occasionally windy, perhaps coastal gales overnight Saturday into Sunday. Rain and hill snow spreading east Monday morning, clearing to sunny spells.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.